Atlanta Saltwater Sportsman's Club

www.aswsc.org

President's Perspective Welcome New Members - Let's Get Salty!

by Keith Mozena, 2013 Club President

In case y'all haven't heard yet, the ATL Boat Show was a success! Many manufacturers of Saltwater Boats showed up: Cobia, Pathfinder, Hewes, Chris Craft, Cape Horn, Scout, and others. Heck, one dealer showed up with a $1.5M Azimut (an Italian Yacht Brand). Even though she was designed for cruising the Mediterranean Sea, she unfortunately didn't come with any rod holders thus wasn't very functional for us saltwater fishermen and women. However, she could act as one heck of an offshore mothership. Our club also had a successful boat show by gaining 18 new members, several who have their own boat, and talking to a whole bunch of great people about our favorite pastime, saltwater fishing.

For those new members who are reading this newsletter as their first, make sure you check out all the details on the club website, www.aswsc.org. There are several members who volunteer extra time to make sure we have a consistent and up to date content for the website and our club newsletter. Paul Kindzia, who is our club secretary for 2013, works as a coordination point of all the club content. Jace Spencer, who has held several club officer positions in the past, is a constant volunteer helping with the club communications. Richard Watkins, our club vice president, volunteers extra hours to seek out guest speakers for club meetings and helps me by running the monthly club meetings when my business travel schedule has me out of town the second Tuesday of a month. Our club treasurer for 2013, Steve Guntner, has been a consistently involved club member since the late 1990s and our club tournament director, Norm Bowen, has been active in the club for many years twice! Norm has the unique history of being an active and contributing member for years before he moved to central Florida for a few years and then moved back to Atlanta and re-joined the active club volunteers.

What each of these club officers embodies is a willingness to put themselves in a position to help the club and to take on commitments to lead the club in some form or fashion. Any social club is only as interesting or enjoyable as the membership is willing to make it. I believe one reason why the Atlanta Saltwater Sportsman's Club has been around for 26+ years is our passion for a hobby we all love, saltwater fishing. You don't have to be competitive to have fun with this group of people. We continue to keep this club going by balancing friendly competition with education and social fun. If there are topics or skills you want to learn or share what you know, please reach out and let one or more of the club officers know. Along with regular monthly club meetings we have a few social events planned as additional ways for us to get together, share stories and techniques, and basically "chew the fat" about saltwater fishing.

The next club meeting is Tuesday Feb 12th but we also want y'all to come out Saturday Feb 16th for a fun weekend afternoon social event at the Havana Restaurant, Atlanta's Original Cuban Restaurant. At 1pm on that Saturday we'll be getting together for a late lunch to hang out, catch up with friends old and new, talk about upcoming fishing trips or tell stories about past trips. (cont. Pg 2)

The Havana Restaurant is in the Crossroads Village Shopping Center on the corner of Buford and Clairmont.

Following these February club events are the club meeting in March 12th and the annual club swap meet and chili cookoff on March 16th. Can you believe we actually planned two months in a row club with events on the exact same days and dates? Interesting coincidence, maybe this means our 2013 fishing will be repeatedly fun and consistently full of catchin'!

Wishing y'all Blue Water and Tight lines,
Keith

Secretary's Report Club Integration!

by Paul Kindzia, 2013 Club Secretary

As our club president Keith Mozena mentioned in his president's report, our club had a successful Atlanta boat show where the club gained 18 new members. Many people may find it hard to believe that an inland city like Atlanta (hundreds of miles away from the nearest saltwater) would have an active saltwater fishing club. But it is not hard when you think of the statistics. The 10-county Atlanta region has approximately 4.1 million residents. So a club with approximately 100 members means that each of our club members is about a 1/1,000th of a percent of the Atlanta population! The club is a wonderful way to connect with other locals who share a passion for saltwater fishing. There are more saltwater fishermen in Atlanta than you realize and we hope to connect more of you together. As we speak with marine dealers, tackle shops, and other fishermen, there are HUNDREDS of you salty dogs in Atlanta.

One of my goals this year in 2013 is to personally connect with you and help you connect with each other. It's one area that the club can improve upon where each of us know "who is in the club" and "what type of fishing they like to do." As part of our attempt to improve, we'd like to learn more about each of you in addition to some of the following;

- What type of fishing do you mostly do (inshore, reef, deep bottom fishing, offshore)?
- What type of fish do you like to target?
- What techniques do you normally use?
- What locations do you normally fish?
- Where would you like to fish?
- Are you interested in meeting other club members who also enjoy the style of fishing that you enjoy?

If you are interested in learning a new technique or a new location and would love some tips, chances are that there is a club member who has experience using those techniques or knowledge of that area. Likewise, we are interested in learning from you as well as I'm sure some members have plenty of experience that was acquired after years of fishing.

The club has a lot of activities planned for the year with events in the Gulf of Mexico, the Florida Keys, the Bahamas and even long range overnight tuna trips off of Mexico. Hopefully we have something for everybody and we are always looking for new ideas and activities.

So if you get an email or a phone call, I look forward to connecting with you and helping connect you to other members.

Paul Kindzia - Club Secretary

Atlanta Boat Show

by Paul Kindzia

Club members showed up in force to help man the club booth at the 2013 Atlanta Boat Show. The annual boat show is one of our biggest marketing and recruiting tools for club membership.

One of the nice things about attending a boat show is that you have the opportunity to check out some of the latest and greatest boats on the market along with some new innovations in the boating market.

A special thanks to Tom Holt for organizing the troops and also setting up and breaking down the club booth.

Our 2013 Club Volunteers are listed below. We thank all of you for the assistance on helping our club grow stronger.

2013 Sailfish Classic

by Keith Mozena

The 2013 ASWSC Sailfish Classic went off without a hitch thanks to the preparation and planning of Steve Guntner. Bob Michael would be proud of Steve in keeping this special tournament going. Our club has been visiting Palm Beach and Sailfish Marina each January for over 30 years. If you've never tried this kind of fishing or considered it, put in on your "to do" list for January 2014. There is no easier way to catch a spectacular billfish on your own boat than heading to south Florida during the winter. Sailfish Marina is not inexpensive, but it is ideally located less than a mile from the Fort Worth inlet. This photo is an aerial shot looking South and East so you can see the inlet in the top of the photo and the 3 main docks of Sailfish Marina in the lower left.

We timed our trip perfectly as a cold front pushed through while we were there which helped turn the bite on. We had four boats entered in the tournament: Maverick (Grady White), Easy Does It (Grady White), BoKat (Grady White), and Where to Next? (Pursuit). I had no idea this would be a manufacturers battle between two major brands but the crew of Where to Next? didn't let the sheer numbers of the competitors phase us. We stuck our nose into the Atlantic and focused our minds on the fun at hand, chasing one of the most fun billfish in the world!

Weather on day one was ok but a bit too warm for great sailfishing. Seas were somewhat calm (2-4 foot with a decent 7-8 sec period) and winds were only around 10 knots. For a January in the Atlantic this was downright pleasant and we stripped down to T-Shirts due to the mid 70s temperature. The Easy Does It team put up some good numbers on day one of the tournament as well as boating the first Sailfish of the tournament. They went 3 for 6 (3 sailfish brought to the boat and released out of 6 hooked). BoKat was fishing out of Fort Pierce and went 1 for 1. Where to Next? had a slow day but went 1 for 1 to get on the board. This fish was caught by Darrin Maietta and he swears it was the meanest sailfish he's seen. It took about 15 min to get the fish to the boat but Darrin claimed it seemed like an hour. From that point on, we chose not to believe any fishing story Darrin told us. Whether size of fish or length of fight, Darrin seems to be prone to exaggeration. Unfortunately, Maverick had some mechanical issues which required a tow in for repairs which were handled quickly and they got back out to chase the afternoon bite.

Fortunately, with the nice weather, everyone was in good spirits after the first day of fishing. Or maybe that had to do with the refreshments being served during boat and angler cleanup. It always makes for a fun post-fishing evening when good friends get together to talk about what worked, what didn't, who caught fish, who didn't, and why mice that stow aboard boats which are in storage (on the new Maverick) decide that fuel lines are the tastiest part of the engine to chew on. (cont. Pg 5)

2013 Sailfish Classic

Day two dawned and the crew of Where to Next? got out early around 7am. The weather had changed overnight and the winds and seas had picked up quite a bit. Now we had winds 15-20knots out of the north and seas which had built to 5-7 ft. Yeah the period between swells was still decent but with all the wind chop on top of that, it was a more normal January Sailfishing Day. Team Where to Next? boated their first sailfish around 7:45am, about 30sec after Ben Lazar laid out the first flat line bait. The rest of the team hadn't even gotten a kite in the wind and Ben was fighting a nice sized fish. The photo to the right is of Ben after he released his first sailfish. With such rapid success on that first fish of day two, Ben was anointed the moniker of "flat line boy" for the balance of the tournament. The action for team Where to Next? was scattered throughout the day but they finished up going 3 for 6.

One fish was lost to a spectacular jump where he threw the hook back at the boat, one fish was lost to a broken line, and one fish was lost to a poorly tied knot. We won't name who tied said knot. They received plenty of embarrassment on during that day and the next.

Team Easy Does It, found themselves dealing with a case of the "where did they all go" and ended the day going 1 for 2. So they had 4 sailfish total at the end of day two, a numeric tie but East Does It had the tie-break with the first fish of the tournament from day one. BoKat and Maverick caught some fish on day two but no sailfish, unfortunately, and the day finished with BoKat in third place.

Day three broke with stiffer winds and taller seas as the cold front decided to hang around and stop moving South or East. So the seas built to 6-8 ft with lots of wind chop and the occasional 12 footer showed up just to keep us on our toes (or stumbling around our decks). None of this seemed to phase Richard Watkins as you can see in the photo (right). He grabbed a mid-morning nap in one of our Ocean Tamer beanbags while Ben, Darrin, and Keith kept the fishing pressure on. We were not sure that we could take a beating all day long, so we purchased only 18 live baits for the day. That was our mistake. Day 3 of the tournament team Where to Next? saw steady action throughout the morning hooking 7 Sailfish but only getting two to the boat. We fished about 5 hrs on day three and burned through the all the live bait we had.

The last fury of chaos came when we saw a sailfish 10 ft off the starboard side of the boat circling one of our flat lines which was 20ft off the starboard side. We saw that fish attack the bait which was very cool to see so close, and the fight was one with Darrin Maietta on the rod. About 30 sec after Darrin's fish took off, both of the kite baits we had in the water where taken and our first and only triple header of the trip had begun. Darrin worked his fish to within 20ft of the boat but one last jump and the hook came loose before Keith could grab the leader. (cont Pg 6)

One fish lost, now onto the other two. Ben and Richard were working their fish with equal skill but Richard was short on line, so we made the decision to chase Richard's fish down. We got most all the line back, however, ended the fight with a broken leader and Richard frustrated that he couldn't get the fish to the boat. That disappointment lasted about 10 sec since he'd already caught two sailfish during the tournament, so we put full focus on Ben's fish as it could be the tournament winner. This sail had taken a couple hundred yards of line out as we chased Richard's fish and had looped the boat at least once. Before we knew what was really going on, she showed her dorsal fin to us about 10ft off the side of the boat yet Ben was tight on the line and struggling to gain anything. That's when we realized the mainline was wrapped around the motors which put us into panic "save the fish" mode. With the motors off and tilted up, Richard and Ben untangled the sailfish crochet while we flopped around in the 8 ft seas. Once the line was cleared and the motors powered up again, we were able to make quick work of a tired fish and Richard leadered the fish for the 2nd and last Sailfish of the day. As tired as this fish was, it jumped 4 more times as Richard attempted to get it close so he could grab the bill. One jump had the fish bounce off the side of the boat and Richard decided just to break the leader so the fish wouldn't beat itself up too much. The dynamic duo are pictured left.

Team Easy Does It had started day 3 in the lead and got out the inlet just a few minutes behind Where to Next? So they fished just south of Where to Next? all day as we both stayed on the northern drift all day. Unfortunately, a full day of fishing resulted in other catches and a shark or two, but no sailfish. BoKat had a worse marine forecast for day three as Fort Pierce is a bit further north and they decided to stay tied up at the dock. Maverick got out in the morning and decided that it was so rough they would not fight it all day and chose to come in early to enjoy boating on the intercoastal with an adult beverage or two to calm their nerves.

The final tally had team Where to Next? in first going 6 for 14, Easy Does It in second going 4 for 7, and BoKat in third going 1 for 1. Top angler of the tournament was Steve Fritz (photo above right) on Easy Does It. He caught and released 3 sailfish.. Two other anglers each boated 2 sailfish, Richard Watkins and Ben Lazar. Four anglers each boated 1 sailfish during the tournament: Bo Dunn, Darrin Maietta, Keith Mozena, and Lenny Pisarski. Photo of Keith receiving winners plaque on left.

Steve Guntner, tournament director, coordinated with Sailfish Marina to organize a tasty awards dinner at the Restaurant on site. This was extremely convenient as the restaurant is directly next to the Marina Hotel and faces the docks. We appreciated the high quality food and service to celebrate another great year with the ASWSC Sailfish Classic held at Sailfish Marina.

2014 Sailfish Classic

Y'all make plans to head south to Palm Beach in January 2014. It is an 11 hr haul with the boat but an easy drive if you have two or more drivers. We store trailers safely at the Lake Park Marina across the inter-coastal waterway in from Singer Island where Sailfish Marina is located. The trip is an awesome way to get away from the cold of Atlanta and enjoy the great sportfishing South Florida has to offer during a time of year where many of us are itching to get salty and go fishing. It is also a nice get-away for your spouse or significant other.

The logo features a central circular emblem with a sailboat and a large sailfish. The text 'ATL SALTWATER SPORTSMAN'S CLUB 2014 SAILFISH KICKOFF' is arched over the top, with '2014' written in a green 'X' over the year. Below the emblem, it says 'SINGER ISLAND' and 'PALM BEACH FLORIDA'. To the left, it reads 'Best Opportunity To Catch a Billfish On your own boat!' and to the right, '$65 / person, includes dinners & awards'. At the bottom, 'SAILFISH MARINA' is written in large red letters, followed by 'January, 2014' and 'Annual ASWSC Tournament Year Kickoff'.

Thanksgiving Redfish in Charleston

Jim Tatum

Saturday, November 24, 2012 was not a normal after-Thanksgiving Saturday. I was in Charleston, SC preparing to track down redfish with Captain Chris Keen of Keen Eye Charters. Thanksgiving week is usually a time that I spend in the woods looking for Bambi. However, this year, I found myself near Kiawah Island soaking in the salt air of the Charleston area.

Chris Keen has been a charter guide in the Charleston area for years. He operates a 24' Pathfinder with a Yamaha 250 hp motor which will absolutely fly across the water. It has a draft of only 12", so you can find those redfish in skinny water.

This particular day was a clear, but windy, cold, late-November day. The conditions were not ideal for catching anything. In spite of the harsh conditions, Chris was able to put us on fish. The fishing crew consisted of me, my wife Dana, step-daughter Erin, and friend Garry. Garry and I are experienced fisherman. Dana has had some exposure to fishing and Erin was a novice. We were able to anchor in a preferred position in the bay near the North Edisto River. Timing the proper tide movements is critical in having a successful day of catching redfish in this area. We fished with Shimano spinning rods spun with 15 lb. braided line. Live mirror minnows and cut bait were on the menu for the redfish.

All of us caught slot-sized redfish within the first hour. Of course, Erin, the novice, would catch the largest redfish which topped out at 8 lbs. Dana caught another that went 7 lbs. We had multiple fish in the 5-6 pound range. After about an hour, the tide changed and the bite turned off. We ran across the bay to another prime area. The first casts proved to be productive again. We even caught a few other species, including a flounder. We stayed there about another hour until we succumbed to the cold and wind. But we had a blast. Spending an autumn day on the water near Charleston is a great way to wrap up the Thanksgiving weekend.

If you are in the Charleston area and are interested in a great in-shore or near shore fishing experience, let me encourage you to contact Chris Keen from Keen Eye Charters at 843-814-8982 or email him at keeneyecharters@gmail.com.

Marshall Shepherd

UGA Professor and Director for Program in Atmospheric Sciences

Guest Speaker on Tuesday March 12, 2013 at monthly Atlanta Saltwater Sportsman's Club

Dr. J. Marshall Shepherd joined the Department of Geography's Atmospheric Sciences Program at the University of Georgia (UGA) in January 2006. He is a Full Professor conducting research, advising, and teaching in atmospheric sciences, climatology, water cycle processes and urban climate systems. He is also the Director of the UGA Atmospheric Sciences Program. Prior to joining the UGA faculty, Dr. Shepherd spent 12 years as a research meteorologist in the Earth-Sun Division at NASA-Goddard Space Flight Center. Dr. Shepherd was also Deputy Project Scientist for the Global Precipitation Measurement (GPM) mission, which launches in 2012. Dr. Shepherd is currently a member of NASA Precipitation Measurement Missions Science team. He conducts research on weather and climate systems using advanced satellites, experimental aircraft, radars, and sophisticated computer models. This research seeks to understand weather processes (i.e. thunderstorms, hurricanes, rainfall) atmospheric processes and to relate them to current weather and climate change.

Dr. Shepherd has over 60 publications in the peer-reviewed literature, has authored or co-authored four books, and is funded by NASA, USDA Forest Service, Department of Defense, NSF-PRISM, and the UGA Research Foundation to carry out his research. Shepherd also contributes to popular publications like Weatherwise and Earth Observation Magazine.

Dr. Shepherd was recently voted President-Elect of the American Meteorological Society. Dr. Shepherd also serves on the NOAA Climate Working Group, University Space Research Association Earth Science Advisory Committee and is a Project Associate for the Urbanization and Global Environmental Change project. He is serving on a National Academies of Science panel considering the security implications of climate change on U.S. Naval operations. He is an editor for the Journal of Applied Meteorology and Climatology. At UGA, he serves on the Franklin College Faculty Senate, Franklin College Task Force on Diversity, and the Geography Department's Advisory and Graduate Studies Committees.

Dr. Shepherd received his B.S., M.S. and PhD in physical meteorology from Florida State University. He was the first African American to receive a PhD from the Florida State University Department of Meteorology, one of the nation's oldest and respected.

Please plan to join us and welcome Dr Shepherd when he presents to the ASWSC on the challenges and implications of weather when fishing offshore.

FISHERIES MANAGEMENT NEWS

January Update from the Gulf Fishery Management Council

- NOAA Fisheries will have the ability to shorten the season for gag and red grouper based on the previous years recreational harvest rather than the current method of using a three-year moving average which was deemed impractical.
- Gulf of Mexico gag grouper season will open on July 1, 2013. The closure date will no longer be automatically October 31 but rather a date when the annual catch target is projected to be caught.
